Buzz Worthy

Unusual sight: In northern Scotland, it's uncommon for anyone to spot a monkey in their backyard while looking out the kitchen window. But Kincaig local Carl Nagle saw exactly that. A monkey was eating nuts that had dropped from the birdfeeder along the fence. "The monkey seemed to know he wasn't supposed to be there," Nagle observed. The young male was found to have escaped from the Highland Wildlife Park, which houses 37 Japanese macaques, often called snow monkeys. Located in Cairngorms National Park in Kingussie, the park is operated by the Royal Zoological Society of Scotland.

Replicated monument: In homage of his wife, Mughal emperor Shah Jahan constructed the Taj Mahal in Agra, India, in the 17th century. Its history and intricate latticework make it a popular tourist destination. However, there is a miniature version of the Taj Mahal. This one was constructed in Burhanpur, Madhya Pradesh, more recently by industrialist Anand Prakash Chouksey. At a cost of 20 million Indian rupees, he had the building built on their expansive property as a special gift for his wife. The house is occupied by a couple who welcome guests to shoot pictures on the property.

Pretty in pink: A Romanian woman became a truck driver because of her strong passion for the vehicle. But Georgeta also wanted to express her femininity in the male-dominated industry by customizing her truck entirely in pink! Since transport companies wouldn't allow such a colour scheme, Georgeta bought her own truck and now works independently. Both the exterior and interior of her vehicle are painted pink. Her chosen hue even appears on the console and steering wheel. Georgeta's two cats, Norocel and Pisy, join her on her long journeys. She's now affectionately known as "Trucker Barbie."

Amazing discovery: On just the third day of his internship at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland (U.S.), 17-year-old Wolf Cukier made an extraordinary find, turning his summer into something unforgettable. While reviewing star data, Cukier noticed a shadow that pointed to the presence of an unknown celestial object—TOI 1338 b, a previously undiscovered planet located 1,300 light-years away. This gas giant falls between Neptune and Saturn in size and is 6.9 times larger than Earth. The major discovery highlights how fresh eyes and youthful curiosity can lead to remarkable breakthroughs in the vast universe.

Ancient echoes: Aerial laser scanning has revealed ancient Amazonian settlements long hidden beneath the jungle, in a tale as tangled as the forest vines themselves. These pre-Columbian marvels showcase a once-thriving civilization nestled in Ecuador's Upano Valley. Spanning over 300 square kilometres (116 square miles), the findings reveal an intricate network of roads, agriculture, and drainage systems that rival those of today's city planners. The immense scale is forcing scientists to reconsider what they thought they knew about ancient Amazonian societies. As the jungle unveils its secrets, it's clear that history holds more surprises than anyone imagined.

Did You Know?

1. Wombat poop is cube-shaped and scientists finally figured out why. These Australian marsupials produce nearly 100 cube-like droppings a day, and the shape helps prevent the poop from rolling away, marking territory more effectively. The cube form is created inside the intestines through a combination of muscular contractions and varied elasticity in the intestinal walls. This bizarre adaptation is entirely unique in the animal kingdom.
2. There's a planet where it rains iron. Scientists have discovered an exoplanet called WASP-76b, located about 640 light-years from Earth, where the temperatures reach over 2,400°C (4,350°F) on the dayside—hot enough to vaporize metals. On the cooler nightside, the vaporized iron condenses and falls as molten metal rain. It's one of the most extreme and alien weather systems ever observed in space.
3. A species of jellyfish can technically live forever. Turritopsis dohrnii, also called the “immortal jellyfish,” has the rare ability to revert its cells back to an earlier stage of life—a process called transdifferentiation. If injured, sick, or aged, it can restart its life cycle, potentially avoiding death from old age entirely. While it can still die from predators or disease, this natural reset button makes it a biological marvel.

4. Cleopatra lived closer in time to the invention of the iPhone than to the construction of the Great Pyramid of Giza. The Great Pyramid was completed around 2560 BCE, while Cleopatra reigned in the 1st century BCE. That's a gap of more than 2,000 years. In comparison, less than 2,100 years separate Cleopatra from today. This staggering fact puts ancient history into a whole new perspective.

5. Trees can communicate with each other using underground fungal networks often referred to as the "Wood Wide Web." Through this system, trees exchange nutrients, send distress signals when under threat, and even support weaker trees by redirecting resources. The fungi form symbiotic relationships with tree roots, and together, they create a forest-wide communication network that scientists are only beginning to fully understand.

On The Lighter Side...

1. Why don't skeletons fight each other? Because they don't have the guts!
2. I told my plants I wouldn't forget to water them this week... They're still waiting for a sign of moisture—and forgiveness.
3. Why did the coffee file a police report? It got mugged in broad daylight!

4. What did the left eye say to the right eye? "Between you and me, something smells."

5. Why was the computer cold at work? Because it left its Windows open!

Riddles

1. I do not speak, yet I respond when spoken to. I do not have lungs, yet I can mimic your tone. I'm born in empty places and live within the air. Sometimes I sound like laughter, sometimes like despair. What am I?
2. I can be cracked, made, told, and played. I can bring people together or leave them dismayed. Some see me as harmless, others think I offend. I may change with time, or fall flat in the end. But when I land just right, I make people smile wide. What am I?
3. I move without legs, I fly without wings. I can roar like a lion or whisper soft things. I'm not alive, yet I can grow strong or fade. Sometimes I destroy, sometimes I gently aid. I follow the sun and chill with the moon. What am I?
4. I'm known by many and feared by some. I come to all, no matter where you're from. Kings and beggars are equal in my eyes. I am the one thing that nobody defies. Yet though I bring an end to breath and bone, I make room for stories, and life to be sown. What am I?

Brampton Enjoys the First Signs of Spring

As the cold grip of winter finally loosens, Brampton residents are stepping outside to enjoy the much anticipated arrival of spring. With temperatures rising and flowers blooming, community members are taking full advantage of local parks, trails, and seasonal events. Families flocked to Chinguacousy Park this weekend, where the splash pad and playground were filled with laughter and activity. Meanwhile, the city's annual Spring Into Action fair brought together dozens of local vendors, food trucks, and performers, drawing large crowds and spreading a cheerful atmosphere. "I love seeing everyone come together after being indoors for so long," said local resident Priya Malhotra. "The sunshine and community spirit are what make Brampton feel like home." Local businesses are also seeing a boost as patios reopen and spring sales begin. Garden centers report an uptick in foot traffic, with many homeowners eager to refresh their outdoor spaces. With more events scheduled in the coming weeks including Earth Day cleanups, farmers' markets, and cultural festivals, spring promises to be a vibrant and rejuvenating season across the city.
